

Having Twins: The Good News/Bad News

THE GOOD NEWS

- If you only want two children, you can get it over with all at once.
- Twins are so fascinating that everyone wants to baby-sit for them.
- Chasing after twins will keep you young.
- You can potty-train two children at once and be done with buying diapers.
- Grandparents and friends will sympathize with your situation and buy identical items, toys, clothes, etc.
- Twins can keep each other company at night.
- Twins are exposed to all childhood diseases at the same time.
- With all the identical pairs of shoes all over the house, even if somebody loses one you can still come up with a matching pair in a hurry.
- Things aren't really twice as much work.
- Twins will learn cooperation and teamwork from each other.

THE BAD NEWS

- Afterward you'll need plastic surgery!
- Taking care of twins is so much work that they never do!
- You'll just look 10 years older while you're doing it!
- It takes an extra year to potty-train them because once the second twin gets the idea, his co-twin will be jealous of your praising his sibling and regress!
- Your twins will fight over everything anyway. The only thing that makes a article attractive is the fact that one's co-twin is eating, wearing or holding it!
- They wake each other up!
- They come down with everything at least a week apart!
- It's either a pair of two rights or two lefts!
- They are just twice as expensive and take twice as long to take care of!
- They'll team up against you!

Victoria Harper of Noblesville, Indiana, is a freelance writer and the mother of twins.